RESOLUTIONS

With the opening of the New Year, it is almost a universal custom to begin with a set of good resolutions.

The great disadvantage and horrors of the war, coupled with the high cost of living which we have all labored under during the past year, are more than offset by the bright outlook for peace and prosperity during the coming year.

Let us all therefore look well to the future and lose no time in beginning preparations for our share of what is to come.

The simplest, safest and surest way of accomplishing this purpose is that one of your resolutions be to open an account in our savings department at once and systematically build it up.

THE DESTINY OF FRANCE

Gulielmo Ferrero, the Italian historian, forsees France as the leading nation of Europe after the war. Already the French republic has demonstrated that as a government and a people it has at least successfully defended itself, whatever is to be the extent or limitation of the victory which Frenchmen are confident of winning.

The French have at least regained the respect of Europe. They have shown themselves virile; their soldiers today are what they were under Napoleon, under Louis XIV; their people are entitled to style themselves again "La Grande Nation" and these things, whether their armies drive to the Rhine or get further than the Vosges and the Moselle, whether Alsace-Lorraine be redeemed or the present boundaries alone be cleared.

As a Latin, Ferrero rejoices in the vindication of Latin civilization, of which France is the chief exponent and Paris is the capital. And who that knows anything of the development of culture, denies to Latin civilization what undoubtedly are its achievements? The achievements are historic. The whole European civilization came from the Mediterranean.

The Roman empire explains Europe and America, and France, for centuries as the custodian of Roman tradition, radiated civilization throughout the semi-barbarous northwestern Europe.

Furthermore, to us Americans, at least, in this modern time, France has signified democracy—the liberty, and equality of men. Even the eagles of imperial Napoleon carried destruction to feudalism, and the very reaction against his military tyranny evoked the self-consciousness of peoples. France facing the great absolutisms of Europe with their efficiency and unity, has proved up to the hilt the work of domocracy, its power to protect itself, to organize, to conquer.

We who have lived since the Franco-Prussian war in 1871, have naturally undervalued the French, as indeed, they have undervalued themselves. We have insensibly discounted their enormous weight in history. All of us have fancied that anyhow their work was done, that France was a glorious memory mainly, that her vestiges were gradually wasting, that she was decadent.

The historic precedent set by Rome in her fall obsesses the judgment. We cherish the theory that a period is set every nation, and that because England is old, and France has had her defeats, therefore their end approaches. Except in the sense that time runs for every man, institution, the globe itself, there is small virtue in the argument.

When the stress of war came, it was demonstrated that the British people were far more nearly decadent than the French. But the English finally aroused themselves from their torpor and for the past six months have been doing nobly. France has done nobly from the beginning.

The principal activity of many public officials consists of passing the buck to the other fellow.

Man only believes that he is the master of his own home. But he's the only one that believes it.

THE WASTE OF WAR

Two big consequences of the war seem certain, no matter which side wins. The whole world will become more efficient, and the whole world will become more thrifty.

Efficiency has already been forced on all the warring nations by immedite necessity. They have been driven to organize their industries; their agricultural production, their transportation and distribution, instead of letting everything run itself hap-hazard. Order, system, regulation, forethought have become the rule. And neutral nations are following their example. The United States feels the influence less than most others, but the tendency even here is plain and irresitible.

This new, modern efficiency, which the belligerents find imperative in order to wage war, and which all nations will need in the economic struggles of the future, is "made in Germany." Though Germany may lose in a military sense, Germany as an orderly and efficient working organization will have conquered the world. Everywhere government and industry, politics and economics, must work together and along new lines.

Thrift likewise is forced on the belligerent populations by hard necessity. Many neutrals profiting from abnormal war business have not yet felt its completion. But the pressure of high prices is beginning even here, in the most prosperous country in the world, to enforce the same discipline that the French and Germans have learned. And the lesson will no doubt continue with increasing force.

The war is not confined to Europe and cannot be. Twenty or thirty million of the best brains and bodies of civilization cannot be taken out of productive occupations and devoted to destroying what the remaining producers create without making a vast deficit of wealth. And that deficit sooner or later is inevitably passed around until the world shares it. Almost every one of us will be paying, for many years to come, our share of the cost. And in order to pay it, and to meet the competition of other nations undergoing the same struggle, we shall have to economize more nearly as they do.

We shall have to stop wasting food and wood and iron and coal and gas and land and nervous energy and time. We shall learn to save our money. And that will be good for us materially and morally.

Investigators throughout the country are telling the people that there is no good reason for the high price of coal and other commodities, yet the price goes soaring right along, just the same as if the dealers are not being investigated. Which reminds us that this country is in need of some such systems as are practiced in the European countries. If the government oficials decide that a certain commodity is being cornered by dealers they go around to his place of business and tell him about it and then fix a selling price, and that ends it. There is no further complaint from anybody. Even the dealer seems to be satisfied—that he isn't sent to jail in the bargain.

NOTES FROM THE PLAYHOUSES

OAKLAND PANTAGES

Rucker and Winnifred, the comic Chinaman and "Coon," continue to be the talk of the east bay region. How any one man can open his mouth as far as Rucker does—but then everyone has heard that! Anyhow, they continue to make laughs—and more laughs—and then there are other laughmakers too, to begin where they leave off. Senator Francis Murphy, for instance, explains about the European war—but never as it was explained before—and perhaps never as it will be explained again. It's a scream. And then there is the headline act, "Mr. Unquisitive." A gentleman with a toothache walks into a dentist's office—and there the fun begins.

Of course, people have gone into dentist's offices without seeing the humor—but not after they have seen this act. It would make Dr. T. B. Mohney, champion tooth puller of the world, laugh himself—and dentists have a proverb about this distinguished extractor.

The Three Keatons, Burke and Broderick, the Silbon Sisters, Georgie Chartres, the famous whistler, and "The Lass of the Lumberlands" round out the bill. Booked for an appearance in the near future is Hardeen, the handcuff king, one of the original Houdini brothers and the man who no bolt or bar can hold.

A rich, hot cup of INSTANT POSTUM with sugar and cream is a most delicious beverage.

Try it!—particularly if you are one of those with whom coffee disagrees.

A dozen years ago POSTUM drinkers were comparatively few. Today, this table drink is served on railway trains, on ocean steamers, at leading hotels and restaurants, and millions use POSTUM instead of coffee at home.

POSTUM has become popular because it is popular to be healthy.

"Props" greeted me with a smile that indicated the world was treating him well. "When you come to figer it out," confided he, "de life uv a prop boy ain't so bad after all. We have lots uv fun, and den lookit all de big stars we meet. People always talk about dese stars bein' up-stage. Well, dat might be true in some places, but it ain't so in our studio. Lookit 'Dusty' Farnum. He just comes in a few minutes ago and hollers: 'Hello, Props! How's de kid?' He's dere wid de smile all de time, and when he's got notin' special to do he comes around and tells us stories, and believe me, boy, dat guy kin spiel out de funny chin goods. He likes to kid wid de bunch, and if we kid him back he takes it wid a grin. He don't git sore, like a lot of guys would.

"Den dere's Kathlyn Williams. Say, kid, she's some gal! Everybody is in love wid her. When she comes in every morning she just spills sunshine all over de place. She usually has a bunch of flowers from her garden and hands dem around. Vivian Martin, Lenore Ulrich, Colin Chase—de whole bunch is de same. Always smilin' and —and—democratic, dat's it—democratic. You know—dey mingle wid de bunch.

"It's jes like a big family at our studio; but, believe me, it wouldn't be such a happy family if it wuz not for us props being on de job all de time. De other day we were taking a scene for Lenore Ulrich's new pitcher, 'The Road to Love.' Lenore wuz to rush up to a door wot wuz locked and try to push de door in. When de scene was bein' taken some one forgot to lock de door. I just noticed dis in time an ran up an' braced it from de outside. It wuz a long scene and wuz going great—better dan any of de rehearsals—if I hadn't been on de job believe me one grand big scene would a been spoiled 'cause she'd a gone through dat door on de first push. It took all me strent to hold it!

"Wot gits me goat do is when de director tells you to do sometin and don't tell you enough. Yesterday I gets a note from one of de directors out on location which sez: 'Bring over de shells immediately.' I didn't know if dey wanted sea-shells, gun-shells or oyster shells. Well I had t' do sometin and do sometin quick. Dat note was meant for one of de odder prop boys but I wuz de only one here, so I had to git busy. I beats it around to de fish-man and buys every kind uv a shell I could see, den I goes to a sporting-goods shop and buys up all kinds uv gun shells. Wid a baskit full of junk I beats it to de location and when I gits dere everybody gives me de ha ha. Dey wanted de fish shells awright but de gun shells came in handy too." Here a roar for 'Props' resounded and immediately my friend disappeared after a hasty promise to give further particulars on the morrow.

SOUTH AFRICAN DIAMOND MINE IS USED AS SETTING FOR "YEARS OF THE LOCUST"

Charlie Chaplin in "Behind the Screen" at the Richmond Theater last night kept a capacity house in the height of good humor. First, the audience would laugh and then burst forth in uproar of ha-ha's.

Chaplin manages to "muss-up" the scenery behind the creens in a very happy manner.

A large crowd attended the second show last night as well as the first. Manager A. E. Northey regrets that he had to turn many away from the first show. He advises "come early."

Edythe Chapman, the talented Lasky actress, who is appearing in support of Mae Murray in the Jesse L. Lasky production of "The Plow Girl," a thrilling drama which is the attraction at the Richmond Theater today, uses in an introduction scene the baby gown in which she, herself, was christened. It is of beautiful silk, hand embroidered and has been cherished by the Chapman family ever since it was first used. Others prominent in the cast are Elliott Dexter, Horace B. Carpenter, William Elmer, Theodore Roberts, Charles Gerard, Lillian Leighton and others.

The beautiful wedding veil worn by Fannie Ward in the Jesse L. Lasky production "The Years of the Locust," Albert Payson Terhune's story that will be seen at the Richmond Theater on Friday and Saturday, is made of brussels applique lace hand made, and nearly two hundred years old. It was formerly worn and owned by the Arch Duchess Isabella of Austria, who before she was assassinated, gave it to her sister the Countess D'Oltramont, who presented it to Miss Ward in London. After witnessing her performance in "The Marriage of William Ashe," the dramatization of Mrs. Humphrey Ward's great novel, the Countess met Miss Ward and they became great friends. Upon the eve of the star's wedding to Joe Lewis, the "South African Diamond King," the countess presented her with the veil and by a coincidence, the wedding dress in which she was married to Mr. Lewis is the one worn in the picture. Also another coincidence is the fact that in the story "The Years of the Locust," Miss Ward, though first married to a scheming promoter, finally is happily wed to a "South African Diamond King," in this Paramount picture.

RELIEVE HEADACHES WITHOUT DOSING

By Applying Sloan's Liniment to Forehead You Can Stop the Severe Pains.

Many headaches are of a neuralgic origin. The symptoms of such headaches are intense and lingering pains in the brow, temples or back of the head.

There is one certain relief that has been known and recommended for years back, Sloan's Liniment. One application and the dull pain is practically gone. It is easily applied without rubbing. Rubbing is unnecessary, as Sloan's Liniment quickly penetrates to the seat of trouble.

Aching muscles, rheumatism, bruises, lumbago, chilblains, sprains and stiff neck can also be most effectively treated with Sloan's Liniment. Cleaner than mussy plasters or ointments; it does not stain the skin or clog the pores.

At all drug stores, 25¢, 50¢, $1.
